

Dr Eddie Zant has a long history of community involvement, especially when it comes to the military. I came to know of Dr Zant through a co-worker of mine, Dr James Wright. Dr Wright overheard me speaking with a friend about my son's medical condition and urged me to see Dr Zant as soon as possible. In fact, he placed the call to Dr Zant immediately. Dr Zant agreed to see my son the following day.

My son suffered a concussion while tubing in the local bayou. The wave runner was traveling approximately 85 miles per hour; excessive speed for tubing! My son flew off the tube when the driver of the wave runner made a hard turn. He slammed down into the water striking his head. He was completely knocked out. Luckily they were just a few feet from the house and his friends used the buddy system to get him to our home. We carried him to the car and headed to the emergency room. Diagnosis was he suffered a concussion. My son awoke in the hospital with no memory of the accident. His eyes were somewhat crossed and his speech was slurred and altered. The doctor on staff said it could take three days, three weeks or three months for him to fully recover. Our family doctor basically stated basically the same to us when we visited her. One can only imagine how devastated we were hearing this news.

Dr Zant said getting hyperbaric treatment as soon as possible after sustaining a head injury was crucial. After completing a lengthy medical exam and questionnaire, Dr Zant agreed my son was a good candidate for hyperbaric chamber treatments. Just one hour in the chamber and my son's speech slightly improved. After two weeks of one hour sessions his speech returned to normal, his headache was gone and his eyes were back to normal. He had a hard time remembering what he read during the first week of treatment however, by the end of week two he was right back at his reading level before the accident. We had to hire a tutor to get his geometry skills back on track; two days a week for one month. Today, my son is a healthy, happy young man. Getting straight A's and looking forward to his life ahead. He is very conscious of the reality of a life that could have been ahead for him, if not for the hyperbaric chamber treatments. We are so fortunate to know Dr Zant and we are grateful for his compassion when it comes to hyperbaric chamber treatments.

A handwritten signature in dark ink, appearing to read "Judy", followed by a large, stylized, and somewhat illegible flourish or scribble.

Civilian